Love, Forgiveness, and Secrets in the Debut Novel, “An Unexpected Blessing”

KevStel Publications is proud to announce the official publication of An Unexpected Blessing, a debut novel by Unoma Nwankwor. It’s a page turning story of love, forgiveness, and being open to God’s plan in your life. An Unexpected Blessing is set in Atlanta Georgia, Chicago Illinois and Lagos Nigeria. With characters that are as real as your friend, family or neighbor the story revolves around one of three friends who are of differ cultures but joined together by their faith and believe in God.

Unoma draws from her Nigerian roots and experience living in Diaspora for the past fifteen years. She writes about a topic that is so near to her heart; enjoying singleness in season and being open to whatever God brings your way.

The story explores the heroine’s elaborate scheme to get her Nigerian parents off her back regarding marriage and the struggle of the hero to let go of the past so as to give himself another chance at happiness. It captures the resistance Christians often have when it comes to what we expected God should do in our lives.

A chance meeting with Feranmi turned that plan upside down. The pain she caused him in school was still fresh in his mind but so were the feelings that never died. Now she needed a favor.

For Feranmi time was running out. Her parents would be visiting soon and she still hadn't found the perfect Nigerian man. Alex would just have to do, after all how hard could it be? What they weren't prepared for was an attraction they couldn't ignore. Will they lean on the Lord for guidance or insist on being in control? Will his guarded dark past confirm her fears? Or will love prevail the second time around?
